

Lee Miller
Bloomberg: Senior Editor
Tsinghua University: Professor

Lee Miller is a financial-data specialist and Senior Editor at Bloomberg. He joined the company in 1991, and was member of the original international news team.

He is also a professor at Tsinghua University in Beijing, where has taught both master's degree and undergraduate classes since 2007.

Miller is co-author of numerous economic and demographic rankings, including the "Bloomberg Healthiest Country Index," "Bloomberg Innovation Index" and "Bloomberg Upward Mobility Index." His data-driven reports provide unique analysis on topics such as: how sushi prices reflect a city's quality of life; how R&D budgets are a barometer of the global trade war; and which states and nations are the biggest winners and losers from migration and diversity.

Born in Detroit, USA, Miller is a Pulitzer Prize-nominee, and won honors from the Overseas Press Club of America and Livingston Foundation for his five-part series "Bangkok, Busting at the Seams."

His association with Tsinghua University began in 2007, when he helped establish the Global Business Journalism program. His courses include Corporate Strategies, Data Diving and English Newswriting. The CFA Society, World Knowledge Forum and Asian Development Bank are among the many organizations to which he has spoken. In 2008, Miller originated the plan that produced the Bloomberg Market Concepts financial-knowledge certification program (BMC).

Miller also co-teaches at Fudan University on "best practices," and has given lectures to MBA, management and journalism students at schools such as University of Delaware, Indiana University, Monterrey Tech, Shanghai University of Finance and Economics, Chulalongkorn's School of Economics, National Taiwan University and the Schwarzman Scholars program.

Miller began his career as a credit analyst at Manufacturers National Bank after earning a B.A. (Honors) in Finance from Michigan State University. He then went to the graduate journalism program at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, where he won both the American Banker Scholarship and Vermont Royster-Dow Jones Fellowship. He also studied Media Management at the Poynter Institute.
